

Vital Farms Launches with Dot Foods, Expanding Foodservice Offerings Nationwide in 2023

February 17, 2023

For the First Time, Vital Farms Pasture-Raised Eggs will be Available via National Foodservice Distribution

AUSTIN, Texas, Feb. 17, 2023 (GLOBE NEWSWIRE) -- We've kicked off a new relationship with Dot Foods, the largest food industry redistribution company in North America, to make our eggs "eggs-essible" to their network of 5,200 distributors across all 50 states. This marks two firsts —we're the first egg brand Dot Foods has ever stocked and redistributed nationally, and this is the first time ever our pasture-raised eggs are available for national foodservice distribution.

Dot Foods enables suppliers like us to ship to distributors in "less-than-truckload" quantities every week. They're a bridge between the big distributors and suppliers. Dot Foods' redistribution model will help us reach even more foodservice operators, from high-volume brunch spots to smaller regional chains and family-owned restaurants.

"People are craving more ethical food when dining out. Our new relationship with Dot Foods will help more people enjoy high-quality eggs at restaurants and other places away from home," said Ash Idais, Senior Director, Foodservice, Vital Farms. "In the early days of Vital Farms, our founder hand-delivered eggs to Austin restaurants from the back of his Subaru. Fast forward 15 years—it's exciting to now have vendors like Dot helping us bring more ethical food to tables across the country."

Dot Foods will offer three of our ethically produced items designed specifically for foodservice:

- Bulk case of 180 shell eggs: 180 pasture-raised shell eggs packed in a case with "Easy Cowboy" printed on the side, so people handle this precious cargo with care.
- 20-pound "bag in box" of liquid eggs: A pre-cracked, ready-to-pour option that gives foodservice operators a value-added egg that's hassle and mess-free.
- Hard boiled eggs in "grab-and-go" 2-count: Pre-boiled, pre-peeled pasture-raised eggs, conveniently packaged in 2-count grab-and-go pouches with salt and pepper for easy snacking.

All our egg products distributed through Dot Foods meet a Vital Farms pasture-raised standard. The hens who produce these eggs have at least 108 square feet of regular outdoor access on the family farms in our network. These animal welfare standards go above and beyond cage-free requirements now mandated in states including California and Massachusetts.
